OBAMA SEEKS ZIKA FUNDS

1 Barack Obama will ask Congress for more than $1.8 billion in emergency funds to fight Zika at home and abroad and pursue a vaccine, the White House said on Monday, but the president also said there is no reason to panic over the mosquito-borne virus. Zika, spreading rapidly in South and Central America and the Caribbean, has been linked to severe birth defects in Brazil. REUTERS

MISSILE DEFENSE IN ASIA

2 North Korea's latest rocket launch might kick off a buildup of U.S. missile defense systems in Asia, U.S. officials and missile defense experts said, something that could further strain U.S.-China ties and also hurt relations between Beijing and Seoul. North Korea says it put a satellite into orbit on Sunday, but the United States and its allies see the launch as cover for Pyongyang's development of ballistic missile technology that could be used to deliver a nuclear weapon. CLOSE TO 2015 TV RECORD

3 The television audience for the 50th Super Bowl this year was on course to approach 2015's record 114.4 million viewers, according to preliminary ratings data on Monday. ASSAULTED AND ROBBED

4 Police have released a video of a man they said sexually assaulted a woman as she was walking along a Manhattan street over the weekend. On Feb. 6 at 5 a.m. the 36-year-old victim was walking along East 94th Street when the suspect grabbed her from behind and threw her to the ground after she crossed 2nd Avenue, according to authorities. The man then forced the woman to walk further down the block where he took $40 and sexually assaulted her, police said. ANGY ALTAMIRANO

DATA HACK PROBE

5 The U.S. Department of Homeland Security and the Justice Department are investigating a claim that personal data related to thousands of DHS and FBI employees was hacked and has been posted online. The tech website Motherboard reported on Sunday that a hacker, who Motherboard said wished to remain anonymous, intended to dump onto the Internet names, job titles, email addresses and official phone numbers of over 9,000 DHS employees and another 20,000 Federal Bureau of Investigation workers. HAMMER ATTACKER

6 A Brooklyn man will spend more than a decade behind bars after robbing two subway riders after he attacked them with a hammer, according to authorities. Anthony Coward was sentenced to 12 years in prison and five years post-release supervision after he pleaded guilty in January 2015 to two counts of first-degree robbery. According to prosecutors, Coward attacked the straphangers in separate incidents both taking place inside the Rockaway Avenue A/C subway station at the corner of Rockaway Avenue and Fulton Street in Brooklyn. Former NYC Mayor Michael Bloomberg eyeing 2016 run for president: FT
Michael Bloomberg, the former mayor of New York City, said he is considering running for president in 2016, the Financial Times reported on Monday.

The billionaire media mogul said he was "looking at all the options" when asked whether he was considering a run, the newspaper said.

"I find the level of discourse and discussion distressingly banal and an outrage and an insult to the voters," Bloomberg told the Financial Times. He also said that the public deserved "a lot better," according to the report.

Bloomberg's comments follow a New York Times report last month that said he was drafting a plan for a $1 billion run as an independent candidate. METRO

App maps out subway Wi-Fi

Subspotting visualizes reception and Wi-Fi signal along 21 lines, 469 stations and 660 miles of track.

ANGY ALTAMIRANO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Sending that quick email or replying to your latest text while you hop onboard the subway just got a little easier to plan out.

A new project called Subspotting offers users up-to-date information on available cellphone reception and Wi-Fi signal throughout New York City's subway system.

Subspotting, which was first reported by CityLab, maps out the reception for riders along 21 lines, 469 station and 660 miles of track.

According to a description of the project, it is being called the first of its kind to capture cellphone reception in the entire subway system through use of a poster and iPhone app.

"Due to these 'connectivity dead spots,' seeing New Yorkers gathering around subway station entrances finishing up a call or sending a last text before heading underground is a common sight in the daily life of the city," read a statement for the project.

The idea for Subspotting began years ago with founder Daniel Goddemeyer's own experience of being a constant subway rider and always trying to find those "pockets of connectivity." He started by mapping out the periods where he did get reception for his own personal use — but then decided that the information was something all straphangers could use.

The project has now become a collaboration between Goddemeyer — who runs the New York City-based research and design firm Object Form Field Culture — and German-based programmer Dominikus Baur.

Subspotting maps out the cellphone reception for riders along 21 lines, 469 station and 660 miles of track. SUBSPOTTING

Original data was collected using a custom iPhone app that tracked available cellphone reception. Four phones simultaneously logged information from the four main carriers — AT&T, Verizon, T-Mobile and Sprint. Each subway line was logged in both directions and a fifth phone was used to gather information for each station. The data was then cleaned up and transformed into a map.

"Until the vast network of New York City's underground is truly connected, the Subspotting app provides riders with comprehensive information on where to make the next call or send the next text in the New York City subway," a statement said.

From all the lines, according to Subspotting, the 7 train is considered to be the "most connected" with 79 percent cellphone reception along the entire line — which mostly runs above ground.

The "least connected" line — with only 12 percent of reception — is the G train, with small "pockets of service" around the Smith-9th Street stations and south of Court Square.

For more information on the project, visit Subspotting.nyc and for the app visit Subspottingapp.nyc.

Carnegie Deli will reopen this week after 10 months of closure

Carnegie deli GETTY IMAGES

New York City's iconic Carnegie Deli will reopen today after being closed since last April.

"We look forward to serving our loyal patrons our gargantuan sandwiches and creamy cheesecake once again. We hope to see you soon!" the restaurant announced on its website yesterday.

According to a Carnegie Deli rep, the 79-year-old restaurant will be "doing a soft reopening [Tuesday] morning and throughout the week. Their sole priority this week is to get back up and running, retrain the staff and reopen their doors." An official grand reopening celebration will take place next week.

The restaurant's fate has been in limbo for 10 months after being closed over an illegal gas hookup last April, though owner Marian Harper Levine has always insisted it would reopen.

Harper Levine told the New York Post back in November that she'd expected to reopen the restaurant that month, but "there was a setback in a recent inspection where more work was required to bring the Carnegie Deli up to code."

On Dec. 17, a statement went up in the restaurant's window to "set the record straight. Carnegie Deli will reopen in 2016. We are ONLY temporarily closed." The letter blamed "surprise setbacks" for the delay, including "many unforeseen structural complications, months of inspections, and required renovations that have taken much longer than any of us expected."

30 injured after bus bound for Conn. crashes

The bus reportedly had left New York City and was heading to Mohegan Sun Casino.

Half a dozen people were in critical condition Monday afternoon after a charter bus overturned on a snowy Connecticut highway, according to published reports.

The crash occurred at about 12:30 p.m. near exit 61 on the northbound side of I-95 as the bus made its way from New York City to the Mohegan Sun Casino in Connecticut, according to the New York Daily News.

Images from the scene show the bus flipped on its side, PIX 11reported.

A total of 55 passengers were on board the tour bus when the crash happened.

Yale-New Haven Hospital employees were told to expect 30 patients — including six with severe injuries.

None of the injuries are expected to be life-threatening, the Daily News reported, and it is not yet clear what caused the crash.

Woman who accused Bill Clinton of assault to campaign against Hillary presidential run

One of the women who has accused former President Bill Clinton of sexual assault says she has agreed to work for an anti-Clinton political group being formed by a former advisor to Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump.

Kathleen Willey, a former White House volunteer who says Bill Clinton groped her in an Oval Office hallway in 1993 when she came to him tearfully seeking a paid job, said she had agreed to become a paid national spokeswoman for a group being created by Roger Stone.

Stone, a Republican strategist, said the group would become active should Hillary Clinton, Bill Clinton's wife, win the Democratic nomination in the 2016 race for the White House. Clinton is currently the front-runner.

"This gives me more of an opportunity to get this message out to young voters who weren't even born or don't even remember what happened and to the women who have suffered," Willey told Reuters.

Willey said she will give interviews and speeches and appear in political advertisements to ensure the accusations remain part of the political discourse during the election campaign.

"They're going to be confronted every day, on radio, on television, on billboards," Stone told Reuters, referring to the Clintons. He said he had reached a verbal agreement with Willey but cautioned that the group was still in the planning stages.

Spokespeople for Hillary and Bill Clinton did not respond to questions about Willey. REUTERS

Amanda Eggert and Jason Robert Roth POLK COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT HANDOUT

Couple, too drunk to drive, give keys to 9-year-old

A Wisconsin couple allowed their 9-year-old daughter to drive them and their 11-month-old baby because they were too drunk to do so themselves, according to Polk County Circuit Court records.

Jason Roth, 36, and Amanda Eggert, 32, pleaded not guilty at the court on Friday to charges of recklessly endangering safety and neglecting a child, according to online records.

On Jan. 31, a sheriff's deputy responded to a call about an erratic driver and found the couple and their children parked at a boat drop in Polk County, about 75 miles northeast of Minneapolis, according to a criminal complaint.

The deputy arrested the couple when he learned that their 9-year-old daughter was driving them and their baby home in their pickup truck because they were both intoxicated, according to the complaint from the county prosecutor's office.

Eggert also faces several charges stemming from a fight she had with paramedics who arrived to help her with a cut on her hand suffered when she was snowmobiling earlier in the day, court records showed.

Lawyers for the couple were not immediately available for comment. REUTERS

Two shot dead, four wounded after Mississippi Mardi Gras parade

Authorities on Monday investigated a shooting in which two people were killed and four others wounded after a Mardi Gras parade in a Mississippi Gulf Coast town, police said.

Officers directing traffic heard shots fired shortly after the parade ended Sunday, Pass Christian Police Chief Timothy Hendricks said at a news conference Monday.

Two men died at the scene, he said, and four others were wounded and treated at a hospital. Two of the wounded were in stable condition Monday afternoon and two others were released, Hendricks said.

There were no immediate arrests. Hendricks said he did not consider the incident an act of terrorism, or being racially motivated.

"It's a horrible act," he said during a news conference webcast by WLOX TV News.

He said the shootings were unrelated to the parade that drew an estimated 50,000 people to the small Gulf Coast town about 30 miles west of Biloxi.

Hendricks said multiple shots were fired, and casings that were found indicated two firearms were used. Authorities were still trying to determine whether there had been one or more assailants, he said.

A vehicle containing evidence was impounded, he added. REUTERS

Scientists investigate possible meteorite death

Indian scientists are investigating whether a man was killed by a meteorite, which if confirmed would be the first recorded death from falling fragments of space rock in almost 200 years.

Jayalalithaa Jayaram, the chief minister of Tamil Nadu, has said a bus driver at a college in her state was killed by the meteorite and awarded $1,470 in compensation to his family.

"A meteorite fell within the college premises," Jayalalithaa said. The man "sustained serious injuries and died while on the way to the hospital."

The bus driver was standing on a patch of grass near the college cafeteria when he was killed. REUTERS

More rescued two days after quake; toll could exceed 100

Rescuers pulled out alive an 8-year-old girl and her aunt from the rubble of a Taiwan apartment block Monday, more than 60 hours after it was toppled by a quake, as the mayor of the southern city of Tainan warned the death toll could exceed 100.

The official death toll from the quake rose to 38, with more than 100 people missing.

The girl, named as Lin Su-Chin, was conscious and had been taken to a hospital, Taiwan television stations said. Her aunt, Chen Mei-jih, was rescued shortly after.

The quake struck at about 4 a.m. on Saturday (3 p.m. EST Friday) at the beginning of the Lunar New Year holiday, with almost all the dead found in Tainan's toppled Wei-guan Golden Dragon Building.

Two survivors were rescued from the rubble on Monday. GETTY IMAGES

"There are more fatalities than those pulled out (alive), and the number of fatalities will probably exceed 100."

Lai told reporters

Rescue efforts are focused on the wreckage of the 17-story building, where more than 100 people are listed as missing and are suspected to be buried deep under the rubble.

Earlier, Wang Ting-yu, a legislator who represents the area, told reporters that a woman, identified as Tsao Wei-ling, was found alive, lying under her dead husband. Their 2-year-old son, who was also killed, was found nearby.

Another survivor, a man named Li Tsung-tian, was pulled out later, with Taiwan television stations showing live images of the rescues. Several hours later, Li's girlfriend was found dead in the rubble.

Tsao and Li were both being treated in a hospital.

Tainan Mayor William Lai said during a visit to a funeral home that rescue efforts had entered what he called the "third stage."

Rescuers continued to scramble over the twisted wreckage of the building as numbed family members stood around, waiting for news of missing relatives. REUTERS

Si o no? States debate swapping coding for languages

Is JavaScript more global than Spanish, French or Mandarin?

TAMPA, Fla. – Florida high school student Brooke Stewart would gladly swap two required foreign language classes to become fluent in JavaScript or Python, the coding languages she uses to design computer games.

Lawmakers in her state have sparked national debate by considering whether to provide that option. A measure championed by a former Yahoo executive, who is now a Florida legislator, would allow students to substitute foreign language studies for immersion in coding, the lingua franca of the technology era.

Enthusiasm for teaching coding is widespread, with President Barack Obama in his latest weekly radio address calling for computer science to join the "three R's" – reading, writing and arithmetic. But many share concerns about doing so at the expense of global languages, arguing the computer algorithms do not equate to conversations.

Stewart, a 16-year-old sophomore in Tampa, said rethinking the definition of a language makes sense.

"You can translate languages across the Internet through coding, but you can't do that without coding," she said.

Officials in Kentucky, Georgia, New Mexico, Oregon and Washington also have floated the notion of substituting foreign languages with computer coding credits.

So far, few have adopted such measures.

Texas allows such a swap under a policy adopted in 2014 that is approved only through the current school year. State education officials have not tracked how widely it has been used.

Oklahoma has permitted similar flexibility for more than a decade, but only because rural schools have struggled to hire instructors to teach global languages, said state officials.

ISTOCK

Many states are recognizing coding credits within the subject areas of math and science. CODE.org, a leader in the push for computer science education, favors that approach.

"Spanish is used to communicate to one another," said Cameron Wilson, vice president of government affairs at CODE.org, which has not taken a position on the Florida bill. "A computer language is really only used to communicate to a computer on how to execute codes on a machine."

Comparing them represents a "fundamental misunderstanding," he said.

The sponsor of the Florida measure, which passed its third committee vote in the state Senate, defends his approach.

Democratic state Sen. Jeremy Ring said his bill aims to elevate computer science in Florida, where students mostly take the subject as an elective. "Coding is a language," said Ring, who got the idea from his 14-year-old son. "It is a global language, more global than French or German or Spanish, or for that matter even English."

The Florida House is debating an alternative approach that would have a panel study the issue.

"Coding is very sexy and very now," said Barmak Nassirian, director of federal policy analysis at the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, which does not have a position.

He cautions against overreaching.

"Coding is arguably what welding was 100 years ago," he said. "Let's not get carried away."

Katy Perry gets along with Orlando Bloom's kid

Looking for verification that Katy Perry and Orlando Bloom's new rumored romance is of the serious variety? Well, look no further. How does "quality time with his 5-year-old son" strike you as an emotional investment? Perry recently joined Bloom and son Flynn for an afternoon birthday party for Robert Downey Jr.'s son Exton in Malibu. "She looked very comfortable with Flynn, and they were both smiling and happy," a source tells E! News. "Flynn was having a great time and didn't want to leave the party. They stayed for several hours before they all headed back to Orlando's."

On an only slightly related note, can you imagine how awesome your birthday parties would be if your dad was Iron Man? But anyway: One other source, at least, still isn't convinced about the budding romance, insisting that and time spent together for Perry and Bloom is strictly platonic. It's also worth noting, though, that this source also insists that Perry and John Mayer "are still very much together," so maybe it's just a delusional Mayer trying to change the narrative while staying off-the-record.

Emma Watson has a new 'normal' man

"Harry Potter" star Emma Watson is said to be utterly smitten with a new guy, a tech-industry manager and marathon runner named William Knight, according to Britain's the Sun.

Knight — who is 10 years her senior and apparently goes by his middle name, Mack — is the first serious guy Watson has been linked to following her December 2014 split from Oxford University rugby player Matthew Janney.

"Mack is just a normal, down-to-earth guy who has nothing to do with Hollywood, and Emma loves that," a source says. "She was left really hurt by her breakup with Matthew, and it's taken her more than a year to feel ready to start again with somebody. They're really happy with each other and see each other whenever Emma does not have work commitments."

Chris Baio ventures forward with 'The Names'

Like his bandmates, Chris Baio knows there's life outside Vampire Weekend.

Since the group's 2013 record "Modern Vampires of the City," frontman Ezra Koenig has performed with Yeah Yeah Yeahs' Karen O and Chromeo; multi-instrumentalist Rostam Batmanglij officially split from the group; and Baio dove headfirst into his beat-centric, full-length record, "The Names."

The 31-year-old Bronxville, N.Y., native developed an interest in dance music as a college radio DJ at Columbia University. "It was a time in my life where I really expanded my musical horizons," he says.

On "The Names," Baio toes the line between an experimental music background and the sunny Afropop that defines Vampire Weekend. The record, which Baio describes as a journey where anything could happen, came together after moving to London in 2013.

"I don't think I would've made a record, if I hadn't moved," says Baio. "When you leave one place and go to another, you get sort of a new life in a new city … You get a new perspective to look back on your life's previous moments."

Cultural references abound on the record, but postmodern author Don DeLillo's influence is front and center. Baio initially took an interest in the writer after realizing that he and DeLillo grew up in the same suburb of New York City. "He very quickly became my favorite writer. It was very much my intent to channel [him]."

While the record's production — which packs in both pounding electro crescendos and melancholic vibes — is diverse, Baio explains that he had most trouble with the vocal parts. "You have something you want to say in terms of the actual words, but then how you say it I find is just as important as what you say when you're singing. … That was where the majority of the work came from."

As for Vampire Weekend, Baio is mostly mum. "Stuff will happen when it happens. But for now, this record and this tour is what I'm really excited about," he says. "I haven't done any work on a new Vamp record."

How breaking up can actually hurt your body

Plus, what you can do to bounce back.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Statistically, more couples break up in January than any other month of the year, so unfortunately, either you or someone you know is probably feeling some heartache right now. The outward signs of a newly single person are pretty easy to spot (they're probably either drunk, sleeping, eating/refusing food), but what exactly is happening on the inside? Clinical health psychologist Marni Amsellem gives us the facts.

The initial reaction

Assuming this isn't a breakup you wanted, Amsellem says directly after it happens, cortisol — the stress hormone — is released in the brain, creating a "fight or flight" response. "Your body feels threatened in some way," she says. Amsellem says people default to whatever it is they typically do in stressful situations, whether it be overeating, not eating at all, climbing into bed or hitting the gym.

"It becomes a vicious circle just like anything that we do," she says. "If you've learned in the past that eating a tub of ice cream when you get a bad grade makes you feel better, then that's going to be something you turn to without even really thinking about it during a breakup."

Literal heartbreak

"Rejection can really hurt someone physically," Amsellem says. "Some people feel actual chest pain." While physical pain symptoms after a breakup are real, when it comes to feeling tired all the time, Amsellem says that most likely stems from not wanting to face the world, rather than your body actually craving more sleep.

Going on a bender

"Alcohol increases whatever your mood state is," she says. So, if you're feeling depressed because of your breakup, it's safe to say alcohol isn't going to be your magic pathway to happiness.

She also says it's important to be more aware of your mood. "Drinking [after a breakup] can increase your chances of doing things you might not want to do, whether it's calling your ex, engaging in risky sexual behaviors or getting into a fight," she says.

What really works

If your default to deal with stress, and therefore breakups, is in unhealthy ways such as eating or drinking too much, Amsellem says this is your chance to turn your breakup into a positive thing by forming some new habits.

"Moderate exercise is a good coping method you can develop that will actually help you," she says. "The adrenaline release and increased heart rate are good things for your body." Then, when you feel stressed in the future, your instinct will be to work out, not binge eat or drink.

But logging time at the gym isn't the only way to help your body after a breakup. "There are really robust findings that meditation and mindfulness can affect the way your brain operates," she says. "You can train your brain to respond so you end up feeling better, which is very cool." She also says journaling has been found to be helpful.

Brooke Burke-Charvet's tips for keeping the whole family healthy

Plus, how women can feel more comfortable with their bodies.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

As the CEO of lifestyle site ModernMom and Booty Burn fitness class instructor, Brooke Burke-Charvet's life is crazy busy. Besides her various paying gigs, she's also a mom of four. We caught up with Burke-Charvet to get her tips on keeping the whole family healthy.

1 Just play

"Simply playing is being active. My son and I spend a lot of time together on the trampoline, though he's a lot better than I am. It's actually a great workout. We ride scooters and bike ride as a family, too."

2 Lead by example

"I take my kids with me when I teach a workout class. It gives them a place to stretch and join in if they want to. I especially encourage my teenagers [Neriah, 15, and Sierra, 13] to participate."

3 Grocery shop and cook together

"I shop and cook with my kids so they really understand fresh food. For my younger kids, [Shaya, 8, and Heaven, 9], I try to teach them about eating the colors of the rainbow as an easy way for them to understand. Then they are trying different healthy foods that they wouldn't normally try."

4 Keep healthy on-the-go snacks handy

"I try to keep packaged food limited, but we're a busy family so nothing is ever totally off-limits — it's all in moderation. But being able to buy healthy snacks to have and carry is key."

5 Take time for yourself

"Carving out time in the morning to work out after I drop the kids off at school is mandatory for me, not just for my body but for my sanity. I schedule my workouts."

Killer confidence is the ultimate tip for looking your best. GETTY IMAGES

Feeling confident:

As if she didn't have enough on her plate, the actress and former "Dancing With the Stars" host has just signed on as a spokeswoman for Poise, educating women about light bladder leakage (LBL), something she says one in three women experience. "It's not a common lunch topic, but it's extremely common, and what really blows me away is that [many] women aren't using the right products or are using no products at all," she tells us.

You might remember that Kris Jenner also partnered with Poise to bring awareness to LBL. "It's a big decision for a celebrity to get onboard with a big campaign like this, but for me, it was because I really believe in the importance of women feeling comfortable with their bodies and starting this conversation."

Shoulder Arthritis Treatments Keeping Boomers Active Into Their 60's, 70's Even 80's?

If you suffer with painful shoulder arthritis – science may have finally found the answer you've been looking for.

Here is why: Researchers have discovered an natural gel like medicine that is like "joint oil." This all-natural gel is one of the naturally occurring lubricating substances in your shoulder joint that cushions and lubricates the joint which dries out over time due to wear-and-tear, age or injury. But when doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your shoulder joint by using advanced digital imaging technology – it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It lubricates the joint and can decrease pain and stiffness. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months. Years for some. Often times shoulder surgery can be avoided.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a trained health care professional.

And the great news is: There is a free report and information kit available that tells you everything you need to know about this treatment. It also tells you all about cutting-edge medical clinics right here in New York City that are offering this cutting-edge treatment with tremendous success.

To get your information kit or to schedule a No-Obligation Risk Free Shoulder Screening simply call 800-627-PAIN (7246).

Walton, Thibodeau, Rambis top names for Knicks head coach job

The Knicks are moving on from Derek Fisher — so who's next?

TONY WILLIAMS
@TBone8
sports@metro.us

Somewhere, Matt Barnes is smiling.

But while many Knicks fans are also rejoicing in the fact that Derek Fisher was removed from his coaching duties Monday, team president Phi Jackson noted the "embarrassing" episode between the Grizzlies forward and the now detached coach had very little impact in his decision.

Instead, it was the rather "sluggish" play fostered by Fisher that was the real impetus. Fisher, who was only halfway through the second year of his five-year, $25 million deal, was fired early Monday, as the Knicks (23-31) are losers in nine of their last 10 outings.

"This was my decision. Well, more of me and [General Manager] Steve Mills. We've been talking about it for a few days," Jackson said, noting something had to change, and it's usually the coach who goes first. "It's a lot easier to fire a coach than 15 players. But it's not always about the coach. The injuries, like to [Carmelo Anthony], are beyond our control. ... Turning around a team that won 17 last season is a remarkable feat. But saying that, we thought our team could be playing better. Derek's moved this franchise forward and we thanked him for that."

Assistant coach Kurt Rambis will take the reins as the interim head coach. Will Rambis stay on long-term, or will a new face take over? Here are the top three candidates:

Tom Thibodeau

He's a former Knicks assistant coach under Jeff Van Gundy and likely the best available option on the market. "Thibs" is a creative defensive mind and with the Knicks a respectable 13th in the league in points allowed but 23rd in offense, he may not be the best fit. Jackson said he was impressed with the coach, but wouldn't discuss his availability: "I have no response. I respect Tom as a coach … but I'm not out soliciting coaches right now."

Luke Walton

He played under Jackson as a player on the Lakers. And more recently, he oversaw one of the all-time great starts to an NBA season when he took over for a rehabbing Steve Kerr, as the defending champion Warriors are serious contenders for the single-season win record. Walton is everything Jackson thought he had in Fisher.

Kurt Rambis

He may not be the most attractive choice — he's not as accomplished as Thibodeau nor ascending like the red-hot Walton — but Rambis is a good friend to Jackson, a confidant, and knows what the Zen Master is looking for in a system. Although, it should be noted that Rambis went 17-65 in his last year in Minnesota — the same record that Fisher had last year — there's a kinship with Jackson and also a sense of subordination that perhaps Fisher failed to develop.

"It's always good to have a relationship [with a coach]," said Jackson. "It's not paramount, but it's something I'm going to have to have, a relationship with someone if they're going to coach this team. That's just how it works. Communication has to be there in a job like that."

Derek Fisher made it seem like a turnaround was in the works. Now, not so much. GETTY IMAGES

Aries Discipline will be the key to getting ahead. Don't expect help or rely on anyone but yourself to get things done. Jealousy is apparent, and must be handled with care.

Taurus Do what you enjoy most in order to find success. If you show affection, your love life will flourish. Work to build instead of to destroy. Focus on keeping the peace.

Gemini Don't let uncertainty ruin your day. Set your sights on what you want to achieve, and refuse to let anyone interfere. Emotional matters will surface if you are too accommodating.

Cancer Generosity and understanding will be your ticket to popularity. Someone from a different background or with a different mindset will capture your attention and alter your course.

Leo Embrace change and accept the inevitable. Getting upset or starting an argument you cannot win is senseless. Listen and learn as you go along in order to avoid a stalemate.

Virgo Alterations to how you live will pay off. Money will come from an unexpected source. Making plans for a relaxing time with someone you love will improve your relationship.

Libra Take note of what everyone else does and wants, but don't feel obliged to make everyone happy. Listen and make suggestions, but don't risk your own well-being for the sake of others.

Scorpio Pick up the pace on something and be the first to make a move. Make a point to control any situation you face instead of letting it manipulate you.

Sagittarius Stop thinking about what you want to do and pursue your plans. Discipline and precision will help you avoid costly mistakes. Avoid indulgence or overspending.

Capricorn Take the time to nurture important relationships. Sharing your intentions will enable you to plan for the future and ensure that you have everyone you care about on board.

Aquarius Get along with others. How you handle people will make a difference to your reputation and prospects. Your strength will come from your courage to speak up.

Pisces Your energetic, no-nonsense approach to taking care of business will win you favors. Romance is on the rise, and a partnership will improve your life. EUGENIA LAST
